State Constitutional Revision By Convention in Hawaii? National Perspectives on the Question

Robert F. Williams

Associate Director of the Center for State Constitutional Studies and Distinguished Professor of Law, Rutgers University-Camden, New Jersey

Professor Williams will discuss, in an historic and national context, the nature of state constitutions, their evolution as unique constitutional and political documents, and the various mechanisms of amendment and revision. The current situation surrounding Hawaii's state constitution, as well as the specific methods of amendment and revision it contains, will be discussed in light of a number of lessons that can be drawn from the state constitutional experience of other states.
